Stop-gap measure approved to buy time while county officials find a permanent solution for providing advanced life support

STANFORD — Advanced life support paramedics have not been provided as they should be for ambulance runs in Lincoln County for the past month and a half, hospital officials warned county ambulance board members Monday night.

Following a spirited debate on why there was a problem and who was to blame, board members approved a $20,000 stop-gap measure to ensure proper coverage for 90 days while the county's patchwork of private ambulance services figure out how to craft a permanent solution.

Issues with ambulance runs in Lincoln County apparently began after the county's contract with Stanford EMS to provide ALS paramedics expired at the end of June.

Stanford EMS had previously been providing ALS paramedics countywide. But that coverage lapsed July 1, after Stanford EMS and the county board couldn't reach an agreement on a new price

A woman who died Sunday after being found unconscious in Millennium Park has been identified as Rachel Lutherbeck, 22, of Kings Mountain.

A cause of death has yet to be determined, according to officials.

Lutherbeck was found unconscious by the restrooms near the soccer field at the park Sunday evening. She was taken to Ephraim McDowell Regional Medical Center that night where she later died.

Danville Police Chief Tony Gray said authorities are currently investigating the death as a suspected drug overdose. Lutherbeck had drugs and drug paraphernalia on her when she was found.

LANCASTER — State grant funds have been awarded that could solve a 911 call-routing problem for south-west Lincoln County.

Bluegrass 911 Director Russ Clark said a grant worth about $70,000 from the state Commercial Mobile Radio Service will allow Casey County to join a regional 911 phone network if the county chooses to do so.

Stanford dairy farmers among those milking new 'Udderly Kentucky' program for extra cash

By Todd Kleffman

STANFORD — On Thursday morning at the Stanford Walmart, Adam Coleman was shopping for groceries with his mother. At the dairy case, Coleman was adamant about the milk he preferred.

"No, no, the other one," he told his mother. "The one with cow on it."

That would be Udderly Kentucky, the milk produced and processed entirely in the state that debuted about a month ago at Walmart stores in the region, including those in Stanford, Danville and Harrodsburg. It is promoted under the Kentucky Proud label and designed to cash in on the local food movement while earning some extra cash for Kentucky dairy farmers.

Coleman, who appeared to be in his early 20s, said he was vaguely aware of the marketing campaign and supported the ideas behind it, but was sold on Udderly Kentucky by another factor after trying it once out of curiosity.

"It's just a better selection. The taste makes it better,"

Arson blamed for fire that destroyed empty house

By Ben Kleppinger
ben@theinteriorjournal.com

ROWLAND — An empty house east of Stanford burned to the ground early Tuesday morning after someone apparently set it on fire.

Lincoln County Fire Chief Danny Glass said county firefighters were called to the scene of a structure fire on Shanks Lane in the Rowland community at 2:05 a.m.

The house was on a property recently purchased by Lincoln County as part of a grant program to demolish flood-prone properties.

The fire quickly destroyed the entire structure, in part because it had been gutted by its previous owner, Glass said. Flooring, joists, windows and more had all been removed from the house in anticipation of its eventual demolition, he said.

"You could say it was completely destroyed prior to burning," he said.

Glass said there were no utilities run to the building and no natural reason for it to catch on fire.

"I don't know who lit it, whether it was (the previous owner) or someone else," he said. "It didn't happen by itself."

Police say woman tried to smother her baby

By Todd Kleffman and Ben Kleppinger
tkleffman@schurz.com; ben@theinteriorjournal.com

MCKINNEY — A McKinney mother has been arrested and charged with attempted murder after police and social services say she attempted to smother her infant child.

Tammie Wolfenbarger, 28, was being held in the Lincoln County Regional Jail on Tuesday on a $100,000 cash bond for one count of attempted murder.

Wolfenbarger appeared briefly in Lincoln County court last Thursday, when she pleaded not guilty. After asking about Wolfenbarger's financial situation, Judge Janet Booth ordered that a public defender be assigned to the case.

Trooper Robert Purdy, spokesman for Kentucky State Police Post 7 in Richmond, said KSP Detective Rodney Wren went to Wolfenbarger's home on Ky. 198 in McKinney on Aug. 12 after Lincoln County social workers received an anonymous tip that she had tried to kill her child.

Police allege that on Aug. 10, Wolfenbarger "attempted to smother her 2-month-old child by placing a pillow over the baby's face," according to the release.

After interviewing Wolfenbarger, Wren determined there was enough evidence to back up the anonymous tip and charge her with attempted murder.

"She basically admitted to it," Purdy said. The infant appeared to be in good health

Ky. economy 'energized'

Sometimes the timing of things is amusing. One day this summer, Florida Gov. Rick Scott mass-mailed a recruitment letter to Kentucky businesses expressing his opinion that Kentucky's economy was in freefall and that they should move to his state.

That very same day, I was in Louisville to announce Gazelle Inc.'s $22.3 million investment in a new electronics processing center that will create 438 Kentucky jobs. A few days earlier, I had been in Northern Kentucky to break ground on DHL Express' expanded global hub, the culmination of a four-year, $105 million investment ... and a couple of days later, Accuride Corporation announced a $5.8 million expansion of its steel wheel production facility in Henderson.

You get the picture. While some people talk about economic momentum, here in Kentucky we're demonstrating it. Gov. Scott's clumsy attempt to raid our economy helped focus attention in national media on what actually is happening in Kentucky.

I want to recount some of that progress, because it also refutes a recent newspaper opinion column by a former member of the New Zealand parliament (now an American "market expert"), who contended that Kentucky is "stuck in the economic doldrums" and unlikely to attract investment.

Theoretical conjecture is trumped by tangible reality.

Consider these facts about Kentucky's economy:

- Kentucky increased its manufacturing GDP growth in 2012 by 10.7 percent – the third-highest increase in the country.
- Kentucky's 2012 exports reached a record $22.1 billion, and through the first six months of 2013, we're 12.6 percent ahead of that pace – the second-highest growth in the nation. We now export to nearly 200 countries, and we've enjoyed an influx of foreign investment: Nearly 35 percent of all capital investment in Kentucky and almost 20 percent of new jobs announced in 2012 in the manufacturing, service and technology sectors came from foreign-owned enterprises.
- Site Selection magazine ranked Kentucky among the top 10 in the nation for qualifying industry locations and expansions.
- Business Facilities magazine ranked Kentucky as the 7th best Job Growth Leader in the United States in 2012.
- Kentucky's percent growth in entrepreneurial activity between 2010 and 2011 was ranked 5th highest in the country by Fast Company magazine. We ranked 2nd between 2011 and 2012 when population was taken into account.

Steve Beshear

- Kentucky's auto manufacturing industry is third in the nation again. We built more than a million cars and light trucks in 2012 ... and through the first six months of 2013, we're almost 38 percent ahead of that pace. Since January 2010, more than 200 motor vehicle-related projects have been announced here, representing 14,500 new jobs and $3.5 billion in new investment.

And all four of Kentucky's major assembly plants are being expanded: a $1.2 billion transformation at Ford's two sites in Louisville ... a $530 million upgrade at Toyota's Georgetown plant that includes a new Lexus production line ... and a $134 million expansion at GM's Bowling Green plant.

- We also continue to use economic development incentives programs we created in 2009 to help existing businesses expand and close the deal when recruiting new businesses.

As of June we've used those programs on more than 570 projects representing investment in the Commonwealth of more than $6.6 billion. As these companies follow through on their plans, they will create or save more than 45,600 jobs.

But these facts are just the icing on the cake. We're also taking aggressive steps to improve Kentucky's workforce now and far into the future, because we recognize that talented and trained employees are the No. 1 concern of our businesses.

Kentucky became one of the first states to implement a Work Ready Communities program, which certifies the quality of the workforce based on six criteria specified by site selectors, business and industry leaders, economic developers and local officials.

We also are ramping up the academic rigor of our career and technical education classes, and we recently passed a law designed to keep every one of our students in school until they graduate. New national statistics show that our graduation rate improved more between 2000 and 2010 than almost any state in the nation.

Doldrums? Not in Kentucky. Our economy is energized, and that energy will only grow stronger. Driven by the goal of constant improvement, we will continue to make the kinds of investments and implement the kinds of bold ideas needed to move Kentucky forward.

Lincoln has had enough of 'First Amendment' editorials

I think I join with the majority of Lincoln County residents to say that enough is enough! We are worn out from the "Inside the First Amendment" editorials.

We understand, already, that the IJ believes in separation of church and state and that it does not want Christianity to have an influence in our government. This has been an ongoing theme of your editorial page for several years. We have also seen the devastating effects of removing Christian principles from both government and public life: rampant government corruption, scandals, frequent lying to the American people, intrusion on our other rights and an epidemic of serial killers/mass murderers, suicide, child pornography, drug abuse/addiction, etc., etc.

I believe that your editorial page would be put to better use discussing the root causes and trying to find real solutions for these problems and the deterioration of our culture into its present state. Then, you will have served the folks of Lincoln County well.

Sincerely,

'Encouraging' data shows high school has improved

It is hard to believe that just 18 months ago, Lincoln County High School received a status of "Persistently Low-Achieving". After that rating I published an editorial explaining to the community what a "Persistently Low-Achieving" label meant for us as a school and community.

As a result of that label, the local board of education chose the state's proposed transformation model as the method for turning around Lincoln County High School. A great deal has changed since the initial events.

In fact, the Kentucky Department of Education no longer uses the persistently low achieving label for schools. We are now called a "Priority School", and ironically enough, the state has completely stopped categorizing schools with this label regardless of performance.

I wanted to take just a few minutes to explain what has developed over the past 18 months and how it has happened.

It is important to note that schools can begin many new initiatives to bring about improvement, but it is the results that matter. Below is a list of data points that have transpired during the past two years:

- Average ACT scores have increased again this year from 19.0 to 19.6.

Tim Godbey
LCHS Principal

(ACT average was 17.1 in 2008.)

- The College and Career Readiness Rate (CCR) has increased 23% during the past two years, and we expect another 15% increase with the release of fall test data. This would be a 38% jump in CCR rate over the past two years. In 2011, only 23% of the students were college and/or career ready as compared to approximately 62% in 2013.

- 66 students received college credit for making qualifying scores on Advanced Placement (AP) exams in 2013. We had more students pass an AP exam this past school year than actually took an AP exam two years ago. Two years ago, only 24 students took an AP exam with only 8 actually receiving a qualifying score for college credit.

- Lincoln County High School was ranked 201st out of 236 Kentucky High Schools in 2010. Currently, we are ranked 77th out of 236, and with the release of new test score data in September, I am optimistic that we will climb in this ranking once again. We established a goal two years ago to become a Top 25 high school.

It is encouraging to be able to share some positive data with the community. These results did not happen overnight. In fact, the work actually started before our school was labeled a "Priority School". The credit to these numbers goes first to the students. I am so proud of what they have accomplished.

Secondly credit goes to the teachers and support staff. They are the ones who ensure that students master the content. They are the ones who deliver remediation for those that are academically behind. They are the ones who counsel, encourage, and motivate students to perform to their fullest potential in the classroom. Our faculty has worked with a level of urgency and intentionality that has made me proud. Here are just a few things staff are doing to make LCHS the best place possible for our students:

- Teachers meet weekly in professional learning communities to refine curriculum and to analyze student performance data.
- Teachers work twice monthly during planning periods to learn new research-based practices to improve instruction in their classroom.
- Teachers meet weekly in common content groups (i.e. Algebra II, English III, Biology, etc.) to plan lessons and ensure commonality within the content.

- Teacher leaders give feedback to their colleagues on classroom products, and they lead their team in developing departmental action plans. These plans are based upon how students are currently performing in their classes and on practice assessments.

We have learned a great deal over the past two years, and we still have much to learn and change. There are still many issues that we grapple with on a daily basis, and there are days when we just simply fail. Regardless of success or failure, our collective desire is to provide a safe and positive learning environment along with rigorous, intentional instruction in every classroom and program so that every student graduates college and career ready. We haven't fully achieved this mission and vision yet, but we are much further down the road than we were two years ago. As a school we are blessed to have the support of our board of education, our central office personnel, and a state support team. The support and assistance that these folks provide is invaluable. We are also blessed to live in an exceptional county, with exceptional people and I want to thank the community for the support they have shown to LCHS. We hope to make you proud.

An encouraging word Words can be powerful

By Howard Coop

The work for the day was finished, and I was relaxing in the comfort of the den when the doorbell rang. When I opened the door, I was pleasantly surprised. A man, a true friend I had known for many years, was standing there. After greeting my friend warmly, I invited him to come into our home and "sit a spell." He graciously accepted my invitation and said that he would "just like to talk for a while." I directed him to the den where, in a relaxing environment, we, engaged in a most pleasant conversation that lasted well over an hour.

Believing that my friend was a bit lonely, he had lost his wife sometime earlier, I gave him the opportunity to direct the conversation and talk about whatever he wished. During that conversation, the last one we ever had, we looked back over our years of friendship and talked about many good things that we had experienced. Too, we shared some information that was helpful to both of us. One thing characterized that conversation: Everything that was said was helpful, encouraging and uplifting; neither a single negative word nor a single critical word was spoken. That, I thought, is what a conversation between friends should be.

Sometime after my friend went on his way, I thought of another conversation that occurred almost two thousand years ago. That conversation was so significant that the essence of it was recorded for posterity. In that historic conversation, two friends, conversing with a group of their friends, "Said much to encourage and strengthen" those who shared in that conversation.

In most situations, the spoken word can have unusual results. Indeed, words, properly spoken, can be extremely powerful. They can be helpful, uplifting, and encouraging. In some situations, words can change the situation of a human life. For at least three thousand years, it has been proverbial that "A word aptly spoken is like apples of gold in settings of silver."

Vaccinations available for bacterial meningitis

By James A. Turpin, M.D.

During the back-to-school season, one of the topics that come into the news is bacterial meningitis. College freshmen planning to live in dormitories on their college campus are encouraged to be vaccinated against bacterial meningitis, which is a serious illness that can be fatal in some cases. Vaccination is also recommended for children between the ages of 11 and 12.

Bacterial meningitis is caused by bacteria and may result in brain damage, hearing loss or learning disabilities. Another type of meningitis is caused by a virus and typically is not as severe and resolves without specific treatment.

Symptoms of meningitis include high fever, headache and stiff neck in anyone over two years of age. These symptoms may develop over several hours or may take a couple of days. Other symptoms may include sleepiness, vomiting, nausea and confusion. Seizures may develop as the disease progresses.

Individuals who notice these symptoms should see a health care provider immediately as it is very important to diagnose and treat this illness as early as possible. Typically, diagnosis is made by testing a sample of spinal fluid. The illness may be treated effectively with antibiotics, but it’s important for treatment to begin early in the course of the disease.

Some forms of bacterial meningitis are contagious, although the bacteria that cause the illness typically are not as contagious as the common cold or flu. Meningitis may not be spread through casual contact with someone who has the disease, but it may be spread through respiratory and throat secretions, such as coughing and kissing. Individuals in the same household or anyone with direct contact with a patient’s oral secretions are considered at high risk for contracting the disease.

Dr. James A. Turpin is medical director of Ephraim McDowell Fort Logan Hospital’s Emergency Department.

Isn't it interesting how we can collectively spend ½ billion dollars in a couple of weeks trying to win the lottery? Yet, we fail to grasp the concept that God’s grace, love, forgiveness, and salvation are free; things which ultimately are of much more lasting value than winning the lottery. Come worship with us Sunday and experience these free gifts for your life at 10:50 a.m. at the Stanford Christian Church, 200 East Main Street (next to the Courthouse).

Pleasant View Baptist Church news

By Scena Ann Petrey

The Immanuel Baptist Church in Lexington will be the site for the annual Super Saturday Training Conference. Dr. Gary L. McIntosh will be the featured speaker. Time for this is from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 24. Pleasant View will be taking a bus to this event.

August 31 is the deadline to register for the Beth Moore study that will be at Pleasant View on Saturday, Sept. 14. Cost is $20 that includes breakfast, lunch, and conference materials. While the event begins at 9:30 a.m. and ends at 4:15 p.m., the doors will open at 8:30 a.m. for registration.

How blessed was everyone who heard the Lefevers Thursday night at Pleasant View! Many old time hymns were sung with the old time Southern quartet style.

A highlight of the service at Pleasant View on Sunday, Aug. 18 was the commissioning of Rebecca Cook. She will leave on Wednesday, Aug. 21 to go to Poland where she will work with the International Mission Board until Dec. 14. As our church formed a circle around Rebecca and her family, different ones in the church prayed.

The Holy Spirit touched everyone in a special way as she gets ready to do God’s bidding.

Bro. Kyle began his sermon Sunday by telling a story about an event in the 1968 Olympics. John Stephen, a long distance runner, did not complete his run until everything was over. Only a reporter remained. When he asked Stephen why he completed the run, John Stephen replied, “My country did not send me to start the race; they sent me to finish.” God helps us to finish the race with an enduring faith that does not quit.

“Being Assured: In Faith” from 1 Peter 1:3-7 was the title and the scripture of the message. Peter was a Jewish fisherman whom Jesus called to be a “fisher of men”. He was a leader among the disciples; everything was great for him until he denied Jesus before the crucifixion. When Peter met the resurrected Jesus, he changed from hiding away to boldly proclaiming Jesus Christ as the Savior of the world.

Peter’s writing is to encourage people to run the race and not give up. Peter, according to tradition, was crucified upside down because he was unworthy to be crucified like his Savior. He completed the race

God set for him.

Peter tells us about the promise of faith. Believers in Jesus have an inheritance that is stored up in heaven for us; we have a promise of an eternity in heaven and will live forever with Him.

Peter tells us about the perseverance of faith. We cannot lose our salvation or lose our faith (if it is genuine). God works with us continuously as explained by Peter in this passage.

Peter tells us about praise of faith. During times of hardships our faith is being refined and our faith is being strengthened. Glorifying God through our trials will get us through them.

At the end of service Brittany Kavanaugh went forward to move her letter to join with us. Welcome!

Dates to remember: Glow bash- Sunday, Aug. 25 from 5 to 7 p.m.; Glow Kickoff – Wednesday, Aug. 28 from 6:15 to 8 p.m.; Glow-every Wednesday night for children K-6. Theme this year is “Consumed”.

The ninth annual Mark Hensley golf scramble will be Saturday, Sept. 7 at 8:30 a.m. This will be at the Dix River Country Club and the cost is $30. See Dan Story to sign up.

Are you a true follower of Jesus or just a fan? Kyle Idleman discusses this concept in his book “Not a Fan”. A small group discipleship study on this book will begin on Sunday night, Sept. 8 at 5:30 p.m. at the shelter. It is open to all young adults. Contact Bro. Matthew for more information.

“Beware of Bad Company!” is the theme for this year’s Disciple Now Weekend, which will be held on Sept. 27-29 at Calvary Hill Baptist Church. Cost is $10 and sign-ups are now! Contact Bro. Matthew for more information.

The Lincoln County Baptist Association of churches has been given the opportunity of using the Kings Mountain. Community Center for ministry in our community. In September, a tutoring program will be started, followed by other exciting opportunities. If you are interested in giving a little of your time to be a tutor to a child, please contact Bro. Kyle.

Thought for the week: “When we pray, God hears more than we say, answers more than we ask, gives more than we imagine. . . in His own time and in His own way.”

Chuck Wagon Gang to be at Calvary Hill Baptist Church

nizable style of music.

Today’s group consists of Shaye Smith, Julie Hudson, Stan Hill, Jeremy Stephens, and Joe Rotton. The quartet still maintains the clear, uncluttered sound of pure music that so established them in the mid-30’s. Four voices and one guitar and an acoustic bass is all it takes for this evergreen foursome to transport the listener to another time and another place where life was a bit simpler and time seemed to move to a slower pace.

The Chuck Wagon Gang will be appearing at Calvary Hill Baptist, 100 John Street, Stanford, KY 40484 on Sunday, Sept. 8 at 2:30 p.m. Admission is free and everyone is welcome. Come and enjoy the Gang in concert on this special day.

News from the Fairview Baptist Church

By Shelby Lakes

On Sunday, Bro. Johnny Baker's message was about the persecution of Christians. He referenced Revelation 2:8-11, in which Jesus gives the Church of Smyrna a message that he knows their works, their tribulations, and poverty. Jesus tells them in verse 10: "Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer; behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried..." Jesus also told them to be, "...faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

Bro. Johnny said that in Smyrna, Christians were heavily persecuted. They refused to worship Roman emperors, and other gods, which was required. When they refused, they could get the death penalty. Some had to walk over thorns or nails. Their jobs were taken. They were stoned, beaten with clubs, burned at the stake, crucified, and dipped in boiling wax.

Even in America, Christians will be mocked. "A lot of these things are coming our way," Bro. Johnny said.

Bro. Johnny said we need to remember these two words that Jesus said in the verses: "I know." He said Jesus knows both by observation and his own experience, of being crucified himself.

They were given these tribulations to test them, Bro. Johnny said. Our characters are tested by our tribulations, we become bitter or better. Jesus said you would be victorious because he is victorious. He showed his victory when he said in verse 8: "These things saith the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive."

Jesus also knows Fairview Baptist Church, its suffering and problems, and its people, Bro. Johnny said.

Jesus says because he was victorious over tribulation, persecution, and death, you also can be. (End of sermon summary)

Rona Hale, Teresa Sparkman and Danie Rice celebrated their birthdays.

Ottenheim news

By Dorothea Schlappi

Well! I hope everyone is fine. August is almost gone, where has the year gone? School has already started and we need to be careful of the buses and children being picked up. We just never know when we round one of those sharp curves if anything is on the other side.

Our thoughts go out to the Cornelia Nash family in her passing a few weeks ago. She was a member of St. Sylvester, as was her husband Ron. We miss them both not being able to attend through her long illness. May god be with your family.

The Ottenheim Lutheran historical building annual picnic will be held Sunday, Sept. 1 beginning at 1:30 p.m. with a potluck lunch. The paperware, hamburgers, hot dogs and tables and chairs under a tent will be set up. We hope for good weather, it will all be at the old Lutheran Church grounds. Gospel music will be after lunch. Everyone welcome.

It has been really hard for the farmers to harvest hay crops, seems just when we think a few good days will come, it showers. Guess hay prices will be high this fall and winter.

We are thinking of the Brenda Carpenter family at this time of sorrow in her passing. May her family find peace knowing she is not suffering. Her family, Johnny and Viola were well known in the Ottenheim area. Johnny used to bring his ponies to the Ottenheim picnic for the kids to ride, they remember and enjoyed the ponies.

The State Fair is going on now, and as a reminder, anywhere, watch out for your belongings. Some people are always out there looking for a cheap way to get money by stealing wallets and purses. There were some people at the State Fair had wallets stolen and the people used the credit cards to charge at stores and used the money (cash). We can never be careful enough when out in a crowd or store.

Anna Marie Abee was baptized last Sunday at St. Sylvester, daughter of Emily and Earl Abee. We wish her a life with our Lord. Also a dinner after services was held and as usual good food and fellowship followed.

We are sorry to hear the Hackers had an accident, both are recuperating. We hope they will be okay soon.

A few copperhead snakes have been seen and killed around the area, be careful when walking in tall grasses, especially at night.

Ideas are funny things, they don't work unless you do.

The house and farm known as the John and Nellie Wilcop place on Chestnut Ridge sold Saturday to the highest bidder for $226,000. An Amish family now are the new owners, welcome.

Have a good week!

News from the Stanford Nazarene Church

By Buford Edwards II

Sunday morning, Stanford Church of the Nazarene was blessed by the wonderful worship service as we raised our voices to praise the Lord and learn from His Word during Sunday school and morning worship service on the beautiful Lord's Day! Bro. Buford's message from Deuteronomy 30, on the subject of "Choose Life, Not Death," challenged us to examine our true relationship with the Lord.

We topped the day off by gathering back on Sunday night for song and testimony on "Open Mic Night" and Bro. Dennis Hasty shared the message with us!

Come out Wednesday night for Christian Education Night. Our kids meet weekly and our adult class dubbed, "THE BOOK" club has begun a new small group study titled, "Growing in Faith," digging deep into our shared Christian beliefs! Come join us each Wednesday night as we dig into God's Word!

The youth are currently selling T-Shirts as a fund-raiser! We have all sizes, and available colors are lime green, hot pink and aqua blue! Sizes up to XL are $10 and XXL and above are $12. Put in your order today!

The Jail Ministry meets every Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and the Nursing Home Ministry the first Tuesday of each month at 2 p.m. For more information, or to learn how to get involved, contact the church and leave a message.

The ladies meet the first Tuesday of every month at 6 p.m. in the fellowship hall. Their next regular meeting will be Tuesday, Sept. 3.

The Men's Group meets every other month on the second Monday of the month. For our next meeting we will be gathering at the fellowship hall on Saturday, Sept. 21 at noon for a horseshoe tournament and fish fry! All men are welcome. Come out and join us!

Stay tuned. Plans are being finalized for our fall revival and homecoming in October!

The church has an active food assistance program. If you know of anyone or have a need yourself, leave a message at the church.

Service times: Sunday school starts at 10 a.m., Sunday morning worship begins at 11 a.m., Sunday evening services at 6 p.m., and Christian Education Night is every Wednesday beginning at 7 p.m.

CASA Volunteer Advocate Training to begin Sept. 10

CASA at Woodlawn has an urgent need for more volunteer advocates. Members of our community can positively impact the lives of abused and neglected children by serving as court appointed advocates.

CASA at Woodlawn is hosting a Volunteer Advocate Training which consists of court observation, in-class sessions and brief homework. Training for September's session will begin on Tuesday, Sept. 10 at 6 p.m. at the CASA at Woodlawn Office. For directions or additional information, please contact Jessica R. Johnson at CASA at Woodlawn, 859.936.3546 or jessica@casaatwoodlawn.org.

In 2012 CASA at Woodlawn advocated for 182 individual child victims, and assisted in closing cases and finding permanency for 72 children- ensuring that they have a safe and permanent home. The disheartening news is that there are still nearly 200 children waiting for a CASA in Boyle and Mercer Counties. Currently, for 2013 CASA at Woodlawn has already advocated for 177 individual child victims and has assisted in closing 66 cases and finding permanency for these children.

CASA at Woodlawn volunteers are appointed by Honorable Bruce Petrie, Family Court Judge for the 50th Judicial Circuit. They speak for the best interests of children in Boyle and Mercer counties who are brought before the court for reasons of abuse, neglect, or dependency. The role of the volunteer is defined in Kentucky Revised Statutes (KRS) Chapter 620.00 and must comply with the National CASA Association and Kentucky CASA Association Standards for Programs.

Last year, 72 of your neighbors, co-workers, friends, and family members decided that it is the undeniable human right of every child to grow in a safe and nurturing home and they took the next step- to speak for those children by becoming volunteer advocates.

CASA volunteers serve as friends of the court, working alongside attorneys and social workers. By handling only one or two cases at a time, the CASA thoroughly explores the history of each assigned case. The volunteer talks with the child, parents, family members, neighbors, school officials, doctors and others involved in the child's background who might have facts about the case. The volunteer reviews all court facts and documents pertaining to the case. He or she then is expected to submit formal reports to Judge Petrie at every scheduled hearing. The CASA volunteer continues to monitor the case to assure that the judicial and child welfare systems are moving ahead to secure a safe, permanent home for the child, and that court-ordered services are provided to the child and family.

Bluegrass Rape Crisis Center seeks volunteers

Since 1971, the Bluegrass Rape Crisis Center's volunteers have made a lasting impact on the lives of survivors of sexual violence. BRCC volunteers are a dedicated group of caring, compassionate individuals who work together to support survivors in Kentucky.

Volunteers provide crisis counseling on the 24 hour crisis hotline, and advocacy in our local emergency rooms.

Bluegrass Rape Crisis Center Fall Volunteer Training will be held Sept. 14 and Sept. 21 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Sept. 28 from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the office location, call BRCC's business line (859-253-2615) for the location. Volunteers serve all 17 counties of Central Kentucky.

Volunteers are given the opportunity to not only learn new skills, make new friends and improve a resume, but will also gain the ability to connect with their communities in a truly meaningful way. Volunteers WILL make a difference in someone's life!

Volunteer requirements are:

- Be 20 years old
  - Have access to a telephone
  - Have reliable transportation
  - Make a 6 month commitment
  - Apply for training (Training is FREE!)

Notes from Sara Givens

By Sara Givens

We all need someone in our lives to help lift our moods, ease our worries, make us laugh and kindle the spark of hope in our heart each day. What a blessing to have a friend or friends to motivate us and point us in the right direction to give us that "hope". That hope relies on the daily sustenance of the word of God. Let us devote ourselves to prayer, being watchful and thankful.

Dr. Darrick Brisco and congregation of the First Baptist Church, Danville, will be the guests at the First Missionary Baptist Church on Martin Luther King Blvd. on Sunday, Aug. 25 at 3 p.m. Rev. Floyd Raglin is the pastor. Rev. Isbell will be there for the morning worship.

The Simpson/Hayes family reunion planning committee will meet at the Boneyville Baptist Church Aug. 31 at 11 a.m. The family reunion will be held in Lexington at the Ramada Conference Center. If anyone needs to make reservations, the number is 859-299-1261. The dates are Sept. 6-8.

Call 606-365-2479 for additional information.

Members of the First Baptist Church along with the pastor, Elder Oliver Miller, Jr., was delighted to greet so many from far away. Family members of long ago represented their relatives that had passed on by contributing to the church financially in their memories as they all do every year.

Elder Oliver Miller takes this time to thank everyone that came and supported the church financially and spiritually.

Prayer is being solicited for Mr. James Suter who recently came home from the Ephraim McDowell Regional Medical Center. His son, Mr. Julian Suter of Atlanta, Ga., his daughter, Mrs. Sharon Walkup and family of Virginia Beach, Va., along with his brother, Mr. Andrew Suter and family, and Dr. Lorenzo Suter, his grandson of Chicago, Ill., recently visited him along with his wife, Mrs. Patricia Suter.

Thought for the week: Decide on something fun to do, plan it, look forward to it and enjoy every moment - life is short.

ARSON

extinguished and the scene cleared by about 5:30 a.m.

Lincoln County Judge-Executive Jim Adams said the county was already very close to tearing down the structure.

"We had already bought it. It was scheduled to be torn down next week," he said. "That's still on schedule, we'll just have less to do."

Adams said work crews will likely now just bury what's left of the structure, clearing the property to become permanent green space.

While the arson has likely made clearing the property easier for the county than if it had to demolish the entire structure, Adams said the Rowland community is facing a problem with arson.

"There's been arson in that neighborhood before. I think there's three or four burned-out properties down in there," he said. "As far as any financial damage to us, no, there is none."

But, Adams said, "we certainly didn't want anyone to burn it, because when you do, there's a possibility of ... someone being injured or another property being damaged."

Adams said the county was aware that the previous owner was stripping the house of its useful pieces. The county allowed the owner to do it, he said.

The Shanks Lane property is one of 21 properties being bought and cleared by the county as part of an $800,000 project, funded largely by a grant from the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

FEMA provides grant money to clear away flood-prone properties and turn them into permanent green space so that the properties can never again become a potential liability for the National Flood Insurance Program.

Lincoln County approved purchase of the Shanks Lane property in March for $37,500.

and was placed in the custody of family members, Purdy said.

Lincoln County Sheriff Curt Folger said social workers had requested the presence of police officers on at least one prior visit to the home, but he declined to elaborate until the investigation is completed.

Court records show Wolfinbarger is involved in a custody dispute over another child, her 2-year-old son. The biological father in that case has filed a civil case asking for guardianship of the child.

Wolfinbarger has a no-contact order against the biological father because of his allegedly abusive behavior, according to court records.

Purdy said he did not have information available on where the 2-year-old has been placed.

Tammie Wolfinbarger, center, appears in court last Thursday, where she pleaded not guilty to the charge of attempted murder.

New Lincoln ED director works part-time

By Stephanie Mojica
smojica@schurz.com

STANFORD — The new economic development director for Lincoln County has a passion for regionalism and works to promote not only Stanford, but also neighboring communities, including Danville.

Frankfort resident George E. Leamon, an employee of the Bluegrass Area Development District since 1989, has replaced Matt Belcher as the part-time executive director of the Lincoln County Economic Development Authority.

Belcher left the post in early May to take a job as Winchester city manager.

Leamon, who also is part-time executive director of the Lawrenceburg-Anderson County Economic Development Authority, The Lincoln Economic Development Authority's board of directors initially solicited applications to fill a full-time position and may attempt to do so again in the future, but for the time being, officials think a part-time economic development professional offers sufficient service to residents of the Stanford area.

Leamon, a Glasgow native who earned a bachelor's degree in sociology from Western Kentucky University, started taking economics courses near the end of his college career.

He soon realized he had a passion for multiple aspects of local economics, including retaining existing businesses, recruiting new companies and workforce development.

When Leamon first started in the workforce development field in the late 1980s, he said people did not readily recognize how closely intertwined workforce training and economic development programs can be.

"I feel my job is about helping the community, not just about creating jobs all the time," Leamon said.

In the early days of his BGADD career, leaders of cities and counties yearned for a large industrial business to put up stakes in their communities.

Leamon said these days the job is more about promoting general entrepreneurship and "creating one taxpayer at a time."

Leamon started his Stanford job in mid-May. During his first week at work, he said five people called expressing interest in bringing a business to the Stanford area.

"One job is as important as 100 jobs," Leamon said.

join the Lexington-based Central Kentucky Phone Network (CKPN), it would solve a call-routing problem for Hustonville-area residents on the 346 exchange.

Currently, Lincoln County phone numbers starting with 346 are incorrectly routed to a Casey County dispatcher. The Casey dispatcher must determine the caller's location and then transfer the caller to Bluegrass 911's dispatch center in Lancaster, which serves Lincoln and Garrard counties.

Clark has said the delay could be the difference between life and death for a patient in need of attention, but fixing the routing problem has not been simple.

Windstream Communications, the owner of the 346 trunklines, wants to charge Bluegrass 911 approximately $8,000 per year to route the calls properly — a cost 911 officials have labeled as highway robbery.

Casey County currently pays Windstream a little more than $70 per month — less than $900 a year — for all the 346 numbers to be routed to its dispatchers.

There are about 1,300 346-exchange numbers in Lincoln County and about 300 in Casey County.

In an effort to dodge Windstream's price hike, Clark worked with CKPN and Casey County Judge-Executive Ronald Wright to apply for the $70,000 grant.

The grant provides Casey County with the funding needed to become part of a 911 phone network, which receives all 911 calls from the area it serves, and then reroutes the calls back out immediately to the appropriate call centers.

If Casey County joins CKPN, which Bluegrass 911 is already a member of, then CKPN can fix the call-routing problem without any additional cost.

But Clark said Wright hasn't confirmed what phone network Casey County would join. If Casey joins a different network, Bluegrass 911 would have no other option but to shell out money to Windstream, Clark said.

A representative from CKPN is expected to meet with Wright this week about joining the network.

Wright did not return multiple calls asking for comment.

If Casey does opt for CKPN, the call-routing problems could be solved before the end of the year, Clark said.

ALS

before the old contract expired.

During July and August, Stanford EMS had been providing ALS paramedics a la carte, charging the other ambulance services $1,200 per run.

Fort Logan Hospital Medical Director Dr. James Turpin warned ambulance board members that the other ambulance services had begun to cancel ALS paramedics on calls in order to avoid the cost.

Prior to July 1, when a Lincoln County 911 call was made where the dispatcher believed ALS paramedics could be needed, the dispatcher would dispatch the appropriate ambulance service as well as ALS paramedics from Stanford EMS, Turpin explained.

But in the weeks following July 1, when the dispatcher tried to dispatch ALS paramedics, the other responding ambulance service would often radio back and call them off, Turpin said.

Once the responding ambulance service's EMTs got on the scene, they would determine whether ALS paramedics were needed and call Stanford EMS back in if that was the case, Turpin said.

Turpin said he heard this situation go down repeatedly over emergency radios in the hospital.

"That can be really detrimental to members of the community," he said.

The medical director for Ephraim McDowell Medical Center in Danville, Dr. Eric Guerrant, also attended the meeting and warned board members the situation was dangerous.

"You all have quite a big problem on your hands," Guerrant said. "These (ambulance) services have been put in a situation where they're having to decide whether to call for ALS based on financial reasons for the service and not for the care of the patient."

"That's not this board's fault,"

Ambulance Board Chairman Jerry Shelton responded.

Guerrant replied that last week alone, there were two ambulance runs that delivered patients in need of ALS care from Lincoln County to Ephraim McDowell and neither of those runs had an ALS paramedic on-board.

"By not solving a county-wide ALS problem, you're putting the citizens of Lincoln County at risk," Guerrant said. "When there's a patient death and an ALS paramedic is called off, everybody in this room is going to be potentially liable for that situation."

"We would ask you as emergency physicians," Guerrant continued, "that the board resolve as quickly as possible a county-wide ALS system in which the entire county is covered for appropriate medical care."

"We are covered appropriately," Shelton shot back.

"No sir, you are not," Guerrant said, as voices in the audience began to rise. "I beg to differ. You are not covered appropriately. I can provide patient examples."

Shelton and the medical directors continued to go back and forth, with Shelton arguing that how the private ambulance services choose to operate isn't something the county-wide board is in place to police and Guerrant warning that canceling responses from ALS paramedics was "medically inappropriate."

"Let me remind you guys of one fact. ... This board only subsidizes each squad. We have no control over their day-to-day operations as long as they're making these runs appropriately," Shelton said.

"That's not occurring," Guerrant said. "The key word there is 'appropriate' and that is not occurring."

"That's not for myself to decide," Shelton responded. "That would probably be for someone else to decide that's better qualified than I am."

"And that would be us," Guerrant replied, indicating that he and Turpin were just the kind of medically qualified experts Shelton was referring to.

Multiple Lincoln County residents and ambulance service personnel joined into the debate, arguing that without a countywide contract with Stanford EMS for the ALS personnel, the cost to each individual ambulance service was going to be far too high.

Lincoln County has a unique ambulance set-up. Most counties in Kentucky have a single, county-wide ambulance service. In Lincoln, multiple, private companies provide ambulance services to different regions of the county. The county board is a taxing district that distributes its tax revenues among the individual companies.

Because most services in the county cannot afford to employ ALS paramedics, the county board has traditionally contracted with Stanford EMS to provide those ALS paramedics on ambulance runs where it's suspected the patient might need advanced care.

The county board pays for the ALS contract out of its tax revenues, meaning however much that contract costs is that much less in the pool to be divided among all the services.

When the county contract with Stanford EMS came up for renewal this year, Stanford EMS Director Ashley Powell told county ambulance board members his organization would need $80,000 for one year, instead of the $25,000 it had been receiving.

Powell justified the increase in June by citing statistics showing Stanford EMS net profits per run from the contract had fallen to one-tenth of what they had been in 2001 and were poised to drop even further in the coming year.

The $80,000 proposal was a good deal, Powell argued, because if the county didn't sign a new contract with Stanford EMS, then it would cost the individual ambulance services a total of more than $93,000 annually to get ALS coverage from Stanford EMS.

At the time, the ambulance board rejected the $80,000 proposal, offering $40,000 instead.

Stanford EMS rejected the counter-offer and no contract was signed.

At Monday night's meeting, East End Ambulance Service representative Larry Owsley said board members could have agreed to Stanford's price for countywide ALS service and it would have cost each ambulance service about $11,000 for the year.

Instead, thanks to the a la carte rate of $1,200 charged by Stanford EMS for each ALS run, East End Ambulance now owes Stanford EMS $7,200 for about one month, Owsley said.

Donna Lane, a Lincoln County resident, told board members that as a taxpayer, she wanted assurance she would get high-quality ambulance service if she needs it.

"If I had a heart attack or something, I'd be better off if I drove myself to the Boyle County line," she said. "I've had one stroke. Do I put my life in danger because of $1,200?"

Shortly after Lane's comments, Guerrant re-entered the conversation, pointing out that most counties only have one ambulance service and Lincoln might be losing money on duplicate costs because of its multiple services.

"This board has no control over that," Shelton responded.

"Sir, I'm beginning to wonder what this board has control over. That's the only thing you keep saying," Guerrant said to a loud round of applause.

More than half an hour into the debate, it appeared the discussion might end without any action taken.

Shelton told the audience the board needed to move on to other topics and that "we'll take all this under advisement."

Owsley jumped up and headed to the front of the room to object.

"We took it under advisement last month," he said, as the crowd began to murmur. "We're getting bills in the mail. We'd like to pay our bills if at all possible and we'd like to provide a service to the citizens if at all possible. But we need to try to figure (this) out. ... We can't take everything under advisement from one month to the next. We're going to get another bill next month."

"You said you'd take it under advisement," Owsley continued. "We're here now and we've got the bills, so we need to try to work out something."

After another 20 minutes of discussion, board member Naren James made a motion to enter into a new contract with Stanford EMS for 90 days at a cost of $20,000.

The 90 days would give officials time to sit down and work out a permanent solution that's acceptable to everyone involved, James said.

James' motion was seconded and passed without opposition.

Powell conducted an impromptu phone meeting of the Stanford EMS board after the meeting, and the board members voted to accept the 90-day contract.

Powell said the contract was effective immediately, which means it will last until Nov. 17.

"In that time, I hope to get with each ambulance service in the county and work out some kind of agreement to either work out a contract on our own or be able to come back to this board as a whole," he said.

Shelton said if the county board and Stanford EMS can figure out a permanent contract again, that would be ideal for Lincoln County.

"When we had (the contract with Stanford EMS), everything in Lincoln County was smooth as silk," Shelton said. "It cut down on all this friction between the squads."

Mayor, commissioner at odds over park maintenance

Some at meeting call for commissioner’s resignation

By Ben Kleppinger
ben@theinteriorjournal.com

CRAB ORCHARD — A vote on a property tax increase was delayed for more than half an hour during the Aug. 15 special meeting of Crab Orchard City Commission when Mayor Billy Shelton, Commissioner Jerry Shelton and meeting attendees got into a debate over maintaining the recently created Veterans Park on Crab Orchard's Main Street.

Specifically, Billy Shelton and Jerry Shelton were at odds over Billy Shelton's decision to pay for sealing blacktopped paths in the park without notifying Jerry Shelton.

Billy Shelton said he didn't appreciate Jerry Shelton characterizing his actions as "misuse of taxpayer money." Sealing the blacktop was necessary to make sure the paths last as long as they should, he said.

And the city is legally obligated to maintain the park for at least 10 years because of how it obtained funding for the park through grants, Billy Shelton added.

Jerry Shelton said the issue in his mind was that the mayor should be informing the commissioners before he spends any money. Because of how the commission form of government works, the mayor is much less powerful compared to a mayor in a city with a council, he said.

Audience members who spoke up sided unanimously with Billy Shelton.

"It would be kind of stupid not to seal it, wouldn't it?" one man asked. "Looks like to me all he's trying to do is to take care of it."

"Do you want me to read you what the law says?" Jerry Shelton responded.

"I don't care much what the law says," the man quipped. "He (Billy Shelton) is doing the right thing."

When asked whether he thought he could have gotten the sealing done for a cheaper price — the approximate cost was $850 — Jerry Shelton said he wouldn't have voted to spend money on the sealing at all.

Jerry Shelton said he didn't dispute the fact the city is legally required to maintain the park but that right now the city "can't keep spending and spending."

Former Crab Orchard Mayor Bill Dyehouse said he thought Jerry Shelton was being unreasonable.

"It sounds to me like it's just an ego problem," Dyehouse said. "You're wanting the mayor to call you. He can't just call you every time right out of the blue."

Twice the debate escalated to the point where audience members told Jerry Shelton they thought he should step down off the commission.

"If you don't like the job, go home," one man shouted.

"I don't plan on going home until my term is up," Jerry Shelton responded. "If you want to run against me, that's your (option)."

Council votes down property tax increase

Commissioners voted down a property tax increase at the meeting, leaving the city's taxes at 12.5 cents per $100 of assessed value.

Commissioners Juanita Pettit, Donna Harris and Randall Price voted against a proposed 4-percent revenue increase that would have brought in an estimated extra $932 for the year.

Mayor Billy Shelton also voiced opposition to the proposed increase.

Commissioner Jerry Shelton cast a lone vote in favor of the increase, warning that the city is faced with "unexpected expenses" that it doesn't have the money to cover.

Last year, Crab Orchard's property tax brought in $21,438. The city could have opted for the compensating tax rate, which would have raised the tax rate from 12.5 cents to 12.6 cents per $100.

Crab Orchard Commissioner Jerry Shelton, far left, responds to criticism from the audience during a special called meeting Aug. 15. Shelton said he thinks the mayor should have notified him before spending about $850 to seal blacktopped paths in Crab Orchard Veterans Park.

The compensating rate would have brought Crab Orchard estimated tax revenues of $22,280, according to the city's public hearing notice.

Instead, commissioners voted on the 4-percent increase. Had that increase passed, the tax rate would have risen to 13.1 cents per $100 and brought in an estimated $22,472 on the year for the city.

The 4-percent revenue increase would have cost a Crab Orchard property owner an additional $3 annually per $50,000 of property value.

Because commissioners voted against the increase, the tax rate will stay the same as it was last year, City Attorney Jonathan Baker said.

In order to vote on the 4-percent option, the commission had to hold a public hearing prior to the vote, which close to a dozen people attended.

While everyone in attendance displayed their opposition to the tax increase through a showing of hands, former Mayor Dyehouse was the only one to address the commission directly on the issue of the increase.

"I know it takes money to operate; I know that. I wish you guys could find somewhere to cut instead," Dyehouse said. "I just think it would be a hardship on the citizens of Crab Orchard, especially the ones that are on fixed incomes."

Dyehouse said fewer than one in four Crab Orchard residents currently have jobs and close to two-thirds are retired. The remainder are "people who don't pay taxes anyway," he said.

Dyehouse noted other Lincoln County entities including the fiscal court and the school board are planning to take 4-percent property tax increases. If all the different entities take an increase, each might look small individually but the total effect could be huge, he argued.

"A little bit here, a little bit there, and soon you're way behind," he said.

In other business, the commission approved a second reading of an ordinance re-establishing a Crab Orchard Police Department, which hasn't existed since January 2010.

Now that the police department has been created, officials said they will begin to advertise for possible new hires to work on the days that Lincoln County Constable Jesse Harris is off.

Area firefighters created a smokey scene on Main Street the night of Aug. 13, as they practiced extinguishing different kinds of fires in front of the Stanford Fire Department. The training event was led by fire training instructor Patrick Denham and Stanford Senior Firefighter Marty Pittman. Stanford firefighters train every Tuesday evening, and this time they were joined by firefighters from Lincoln County Station No. 8. ## MILK

Coleman said enthusiastically. "It's a great option if you can afford the extra dollar, and you know it's going to help somebody out."

Ray Sims, who's been milking cows since 1959, and his daughter and farming partner Jennifer Smith, are two of the 105 Kentucky dairy operations that are earning an extra 7 cents per gallon for the milk they sell to Udderly Kentucky. They are among a handful of dairy farmers in Lincoln, Casey, Mercer and Garrard counties that are participating in the program.

"I like the idea," said Sims, 76, whose farm is on Mack Sims Road in the Parlor Grove community in southern Lincoln County. "Anything to help advertise milk and help make ends meet."

On the surface, 7 cents a gallon for milk that is priced about $1 higher than Walmart's Great Value house brand doesn't seem like much. But for Sims and Smith, who currently milk 26 cows twice a day to produce about 115 gallons per day, it adds up. Rough math shows that means an extra $8 a day, multiplied by 365 days to equal nearly $3,000 a year.

"It will help keep the lights on," Sims said.

Keeping the lights on in dairies across the state was the prime motivation behind Udderly Kentucky, Commissioner of Agriculture James Comer said Thursday.

"In 1980, there were 3,500 dairies in Kentucky. There are 750 today," Comer said in a phone interview from the Kentucky State Fair. "The dairy industry has had a very difficult time over the last three decades. There's no harder working group of farmers out there. We wanted to do something to help that industry."

Sims knows that story first-hand. He said he used to be able to count 20 dairy farmers among his neighbors. Now he can only count one. Milk consumption has declined and profits have fallen dramatically, he said. His herd is less than half the size it used to be. He's stayed in the game, he said, because "I'm too contrary to get out."

Smith, his daughter and partner, started milking when she was 18 and has never had a job off of the farm. Her grown sons, however, will not become the fourth generation of the family in the business. They decided to pursue other careers after filling in for mom for a few months when she was recovering from eye surgery. They found the daily commitment too much, the work too hard and the reward too little, Smith said.

"They were amazed at Dad. He's tough as shoe leather. He worked circles around his grandsons," Smith recalled. "They decided after that to do something else."

To help make Kentucky dairies more sustainable for future farmers, Comer helped broker deals with the Prairie Farms (formerly Southern Belle) pasteurization facility in Somerset and Walmart to get milk produced and processed exclusively in Kentucky into the coolers of the mega-retailer's locations around the state.

The Department of Agriculture had to use its reputation and resources to make the deals happen, Comer said.

"It's not something a country lawyer and a small group of farmers could get very far with. We have access to some high-powered law firms in Louisville," he said. "You have to use your credibility as a department to get in the door to big corporations like Walmart. We used government to open the door and create a great opportunity for a group of small farmers, now we're getting out of the way and letting the private sector succeed."

Though Comer said no hard sales numbers for Udderly Kentucky are yet available, there is evidence the homegrown milk is proving popular with costumers.

"We believed consumers would respond. There's a huge 'buy local' food movement, especially in the urban areas, and people will pay a premium for it," Comer said. "They want to know where food comes from, that its sustainable, and they want to keep their money in their own communities."

"It's doing exceptionally well," he continued. "Walmart now wants it in half-gallon jugs. That's a good sign. We can't supply enough milk and are trying to get more farmers in the program."

Janie Scruggs with Prairie Farms in Somerset couldn't provide sales figures for Udderly Kentucky either, but agreed with Comer the product has quickly become a hit.

"It's doing really well," Scruggs said. "A lot of time we're waiting for milk to process."

Scruggs explained that tanker trucks are used to collect milk from program participants around the state and then processed and bottled separately at the Somerset facility, which handles several other brands of milk. The turn-around time from when Udderly Kentucky milk is picked up from a farmer until it is processed, and delivered to Walmart for sale is about three days, Scruggs said.

Much of the other milk processed in Somerset is hauled in from states to the north such as Michigan, Illinois and Indiana, and then distributed to states to south under the Prairie Farms or other brands carried at Aldi's, Save-a-Lot and other chains. Comer said that most of the milk sold in Kentucky actually comes from Arizona and New Mexico.

"You know exactly where (Udderly Kentucky) milk was produced and processed," Comer said. "There's no question that this is a 100 percent local, Kentucky product. It's the freshest milk you can get."

Smith agreed. "I think you can really taste the difference," she said. "We think it's a better product."

Football season is here!

Lincoln, Boyle renew rivalry in Friday's Death Valley Bowl opener

By Nancy Leedy

The pulse of some Lincoln countians is a little quicker today. Blood pressure is a little higher, too.

Why the sudden changes one might ask. The answer is quite simple – the start of the prep football season.

For those fans anticipating the start of the 2013 Lincoln County High School football season the time is now, with the kickoff of the season tomorrow night.

The Lincoln County Patriots and coach Mike Settles open their gridiron campaign in game one of the 16th Annual PBK Bank Death Valley Bowl double-header Friday at LCHS.

The anticipation for this year's opener may be slightly more elevated than usual as Friday's 6 p.m. matchup renews the Lincoln County and Boyle County football rivalry that has been dormant for eight years.

Boyle won the last meeting between the two schools 63-8 on Oct. 29, 2004. The Rebels, who led Lincoln 13-11 in the series before it

Lunsford shoots 86 in Garrard Invitational

By Nancy Leedy

STANFORD — Cody Lunsford carded Lincoln County's low round in the annual Garrard County Invitational Saturday, turning in an 18-hole score of 86 at the Dix River Golf Course.

Lunsford, an LCHS junior, had Lincoln's only sub-90 round in the tournament. Taylor Edwards finished with a 91, Hunter Munford followed with a 92 and Roland Taylor rounded out the team scoring with a 95. The four-man score of 364 kept Lincoln out of contention for a possible team title, with the Patriots finishing 60 strokes back of the winning team. Lincoln, which also had Blake Henderson on course, placed 13th in the 15-team tournament.

Lexington Catholic claimed the team tourney title, with Chase Thornhill and Justin Baker leading the Knights to victory with rounds of 75. All four of Catholic's scoring players finished in the 70's with Paul Mitchell and Cooper Collins each posting rounds

DEADLOCKED: Lincoln, Mercer girls soccer opener ends in 1-1 tie

By Nancy Leedy
HARRODSBURG —

The girls soccer season opener between Lincoln County and Mercer County ended the same way as the teams' last meeting – in a tie.

On Sept. 24, 2012, the Lincoln-Mercer game at LCHS ended in a 1-1 tie. Monday night's game on Mercer's home field ended with the same 1-1 result.

In many ways, the game was a tale of two halves for Lincoln, with the Lady Patriots' second-half attack looking nothing like it did in the first half. Lincoln (0-1) jumped on the scoreboard early in the first half and was on the offensive for most of the period, but the team could not maintain its intensity the second half, allowing Mercer (1-0) to come back and even the score.

Lincoln coach Andrew Kaiser said fatigue could have been a factor in the Lady Patriots' sluggish second-half effort.

"We were dragging a little bit in the second half. I think we were just tired," he said. "It's a long season and we're still trying to get in shape, get game-ready."

Lincoln got on the scoreboard in the 10th minute of the game when Micheala Sebastian booted in a penalty kick on Mercer goalkeeper Amanda Howard. Lincoln earned the PK after a Mercer player tripped Lady Pat Rachel Spangler in the goalie box.

For 38 minutes Monday, the Lady Patriots held to their 1-0 edge over the Lady Titans. A goal by Michelle Roby eight minutes into the second half changed that. The lofting

Sayre tops Lincoln 5-2

By Nancy Leedy

STANFORD — Lincoln County boys soccer coach Chaz Garcia knows that the key to winning soccer games is defense – if the opponents can't score, they can't win.

So when graduation claimed the bulk of the Patriot defense, the second-year coach had his concerns about rebuilding for the 2013 season.

Tuesday night those concerns were realized. The Patriots were a competitive bunch in their first game of the season, but they could not keep visiting Sayre out of goal, as the Spartans won 5-2.

"We had talked and we knew that defense was going to make or break us this game," Garcia said. "We graduated most of the defense last year and now we put a lot of pressure on them. They didn't really play bad. They actually played really well, they're just not communicating back there."

Four different Spartans scored on Lincoln goalkeeper Logan Young, with Willy Martin initiating the scoring just three minutes into play. Martin dribbled to the front of goal then just punched the ball in past Young. Just over a minute later, Harrison Dunn delivered a hard kick right in front of the goal to make it a 2-0 ballgame.

For most of the game, Lincoln proved more than capable of keeping up with the Spartans, and ended up with a 19-18 edge in shots on goals. Unfortunately for the Patriots, they could not match the aim of the Spartan offense.

Lincoln (0-1) did knock the goose egg off its side of the scoreboard before the half, with Royce Cummins getting into goal off a fastbreak in the 13th minute to challenge Sayre 2-1.

Sayre (1-0) wasted little time answering the Cummins goal, though, with Hisham Amr scoring just two minutes after the Lincoln score to make SAYRE'S Jess Mendes claimed he had his arm at his side when he was called for a holding penalty against Lincoln's Blake Henderson on this play, however, the photo proves the official made the correct call. Use your KY X-tra app on your smartphone or tablet to access bonus boys soccer pictures.

ended, went on to finish the 2004 season 13-2 and as Class 4A state runners-up.

Lincoln, whose largest winning margin in the series was 53-6, shut out Boyle 27-0 in its last win on Sept. 4, 1992.

Boyle, which is led by former Lincoln coach Larry French, finished 8-5 last season, making it all the way to the Class 4A state quarterfinals before being defeated by Lexington Catholic 27-16.

Lincoln closed out the 2012 season at 5-6. The Patriots also made it into the state playoffs, but they bowed out in the first round of the Class 5A playoffs in a 52-14 loss to Harlan County.

The Death Valley Bowl (DVB) will feature Bullitt East and Frankfort in head-to-head competition in the second game of the evening. Kickoff is set for around 8:15 p.m..

Bullitt East, which is led by Darrell Vincent, posted a 4-7 record last season. The Chargers made it into Class 5A playoff contention but Jeffersonton knocked them out 17-16 in the first round.

Frankfort can boast of the best 2012 record of any of Friday's DVB teams, finishing at 11-2. The Panthers, led by coach Craig Foley, dominated the early rounds of the 2012 Class A state playoffs, outscoring Ludlow and Bellevue 104-0. But Frankfort's march through the playoffs ended in a 35-13 loss to Beechwood in the quarterfinal round.

Tickets for the Death Valley Bowl are $10 per person. Children not of school age will be admitted free. The $10 admission covers both games (no discounts are offered for fans wanting to see only one game). No coaching cards or season passes will be accepted at the gate.

At the end of each bowl game, a Death Valley Bowl Most Valuable Player will be selected from each team and presented with a trophy.

shot from the left wing hit off the right cross bar and dropped in behind Lincoln goalkeeper Jerrica Kidd to make it a 1-1 ballgame.

"We were just running out of gas," Kaiser said. "We didn't play the way we had the first half. They played pretty good, but I felt like we could play better, and we will play better. It's just going to take a little bit of time."

Mercer, which outshot Lincoln 8-2 in the second half, had several opportunities to break the tie in the final 32 minutes, including two serious threats which involved penalties.

Mercer players and fans celebrated in the 17th minute after the Lady Titans scored on Kidd, however, the goal was nullified on a dangerous play penalty. It was a Lincoln penalty in the 21st minute that set up the next serious threat – a penalty kick. Mercer earned the PK off a Lincoln handball in the box penalty and Madaline Bartley stepped up to take the potential game-winning kick. Bartley went low to the middle on the kick but Kidd was there to make the save for Lincoln.

"Our defense played well, they sure did," said Kaiser. "In fact, everybody did. I thought, for the most part, the girls played good. Obviously it's early and we have some things to work on, but I'm proud of the girls."

SAYRE

it 3-1.

"We played just as well as they did," Garcia said. "At the beginning our first touch got us a little bit. But our decision making was good, play was good, the physical play was good – we beat and banged as much as they did – the first touch and defense got us."

"We talked about it at half-time. We played just as well as they did. Defensively, we just didn't make it happen."

Just like the start of the game, the Spartans delivered another 1-2 punch early in the second half. Taylor Absher dribbled to the left of goal then kicked the ball into the right corner five minutes into the period then, less than two minutes later, Martin scored again, getting his shot in under a diving Logan Young to put Sayre up 5-1.

Cummins added a final goal for Lincoln with just over 17 minutes to play in the game for the 5-2 final.

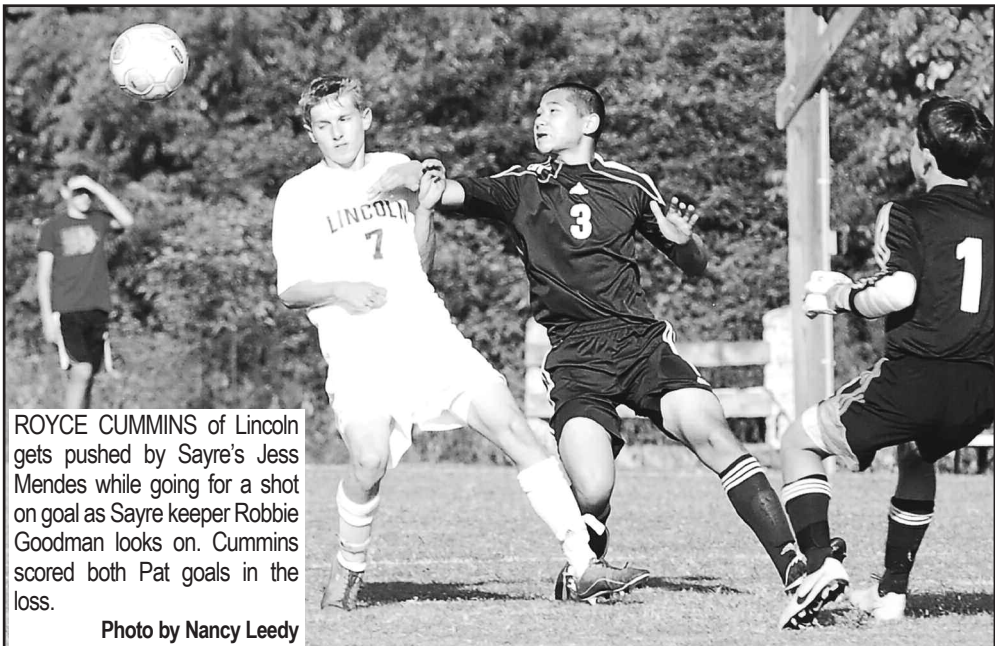

"We've got to communicate better," Garcia said. "You've got to know who's on your backside so we play a different formation. It is a tough formation, but it's strong. The big thing is you have to communicate. If we can fix that we'll be pretty solid."

While disappointed with the season-opening loss, Garcia wasn't completely surprised by the outcome due to his scheduling following last year's successful season. Lincoln went 12-7 in 2012 and made it to the 12th Region semifinals.

"I knew our first four games would be tough. This was one I felt like was going to be heads-or-tails," he said. "Then we've got Model on Thursday, and it's going to take all we have to play with them. Model's really going to give them a run for their money. Then we have Mercer (defending 12th Region champs) Saturday and John Hardin on Monday."

"I made this schedule for the rest of the season. We could start out 0-4 and then finish up the season 11-6."

ROYCE CUMMINS of Lincoln gets pushed by Sayre's Jess Mendes while going for a shot on goal as Sayre keeper Robbie Goodman looks on. Cummins scored both Pat goals in the loss.

FARM FACTS

By Dan Grigson
Lincoln County Extension Office

Now is the time to stockpile forages, renovate fields

We have enjoyed timely rains and cool temperatures throughout the summer allowing for plentiful pastures. That should make it easy for producers to stockpile some of those fields now for cattle to graze in the fall and winter months, reducing hay feeding and lowering overall feed costs. Those rains should also allow for successful fall pasture renovations as well.

Stockpiling is a very good practice. Stockpiling tall fescue will extend pastures later into the season than any other grasses that we have and the data continues to show that everyday of extended grazing is cheaper than the days of feeding hay.

More and more producers are seeing the importance of stockpiling and making more efficient use of their pastures throughout the year thanks to educational programs such as Master Cattlemen Program, grazing conferences, and the Master Grazer program.

The interest is there. We are seeing the profit potential in beef cattle and are putting an effort toward that. Cattle producers in Kentucky can make some inexpensive changes that could improve the quality of their animals and the management of those animals. One of the simplest things is stockpiling. The cost of that feed is about a third of the cost of having to feed hay.

For stockpiling to be most effective you must start with green, growing tissue. Fortunately, the rains have been timely this year allowing for grasses to be available for stockpiling.

We need to be very objective about the fields we stockpile. We know that in Kentucky we have two wonderful grasses, Kentucky bluegrass and tall fescue, that are excellent for stockpiling. It is important to graze pasture down first, then apply nitrogen (150 to 200 pounds of ammonia nitrate per acre) to stimulate lush vegetative growth and stay off those fields until we essentially use up all the other pastures. Hopefully, that will take us to Thanksgiving and then we can turn the cattle into that stockpiled material.

While nitrogen prices are higher than we'd like, our data still suggests that anything we can do to graze longer and feed less hay or silage is still economical to the beef producer. You can get 25 pounds of dry matter for every pound of nitrogen you apply and even with nitrogen prices today that's economical.

It is best to get nitrogen applied in August for each week that goes by in September before it is applied will mean less and less effectiveness from nitrogen on fall growth.

In addition to stockpiling forages for winter use, now is the time to begin pasture and hayfield renovation.

A very good season is shaping up for renovation or re-establishment of pastures because we've had rains to get moisture into the soil. It looks like we are in a pattern where we will continue to get moisture, which we didn't have last fall. Last fall was a terrible time to establish.

The month of September is a great time to get grasses started. Alfalfa seedings are recommended for late summer. Aug. 15 is the ideal time and the later it gets into the fall the riskier it is that alfalfa will fail. Grass though can be successfully established throughout September, but earlier September is much better than later in the month. Make sure fertility and pH is where it needs to be for the crop being established. If a soil test hasn't already been done, take one and fertilize accordingly once the seeding gets established.

Principles producers need to abide by, in addition to soil testing, is to match plant species to soils, select the right varieties, planting date, seeding rate, seeding method and planting depth. More details can be obtained by contacting us at the U.K. Lincoln County Extension Office

Adding clover into existing pastures is also beneficial. It will eliminate the need to add nitrogen because of its nitrogen fixation, improve the quality of the pastures, and overcome some of the cattle production problems associated with feeding endophyte-infected fescue. We encourage producers to seed clover in February through a freeze/thaw method or in March if they are using a no-till drill. Now is the time to get fertility in order and do any weed control treatments. Herbicides applied in the fall will have no residual affect on the clover when it is seeded next spring.

Thousands of acres of Kentucky farmland are devoted to the production of pasture and hay for the state's cattle industry. Stockpiling forages for winter feed and renovating pasture and hayfields are important parts of a successful beef cattle operation. More information on forage production can be found at the Lincoln County office of the UK Cooperative Extension Service or the U.K. forages Website at <http://www.uky.edu/ag/forages>.

Lincoln Middle School students complete Rogers Explorers program

Lincoln County Middle School students David Burton and Shelby Shelton developed their math, science, and technology skills this summer at The Center for Rural Development's 2013 Rogers Explorers youth leadership program.

The students were among 120 rising high school freshmen from 38 Southern and Eastern Kentucky counties to attend and graduate from one of four summer sessions of the Rogers Explorers program.

"Rogers Explorers opened my eyes to new ideas and new career paths," said Burton. "The program has helped me to meet new people and practice leadership skills I will need in the future."

Rogers Explorers, a three-day, two-night program held on a college campus, provides leadership and educational opportunities for middle school graduates to learn more about math, science, and technology. Graduates are encouraged to work toward building careers in these in-demand career fields.

"These students certainly have what it takes to become the future leaders of Southern and Eastern Kentucky," said Delaney Stephens, community liaison and youth programs coordinator. "The Center congratulates all graduates of this year's program. We also thank the four higher education institutions that partner with The Center to provide educational leadership opportunities to youth in our region."

The Rogers Explorers program is presented by The Center in partnership with Lindsey Wilson College, University of the Cumberlands, Eastern Kentucky University, and Morehead State University.

David is the son of Judy Burton of Stanford. Shelby is the daughter of James and Misty Shelton of Waynesburg.
